Prime Vision opens UK office

To support its booming UK business in the postal, warehouse and logistics markets Prime Vision has opened a dedicated office in Bristol. This follows four years of exponential growth in the UK and is the latest regional centre to be established for the development of 'local' sales, support and project management resources. A similar office in Sydney, Australia was opened earlier this year.

"Prime Vision has become hugely successful in the UK market because it offers a unique combination of talents," explains Prime Vision's Mark Ryder. "We are core developers of recognition technologies, systems integrators and project management specialists and these abilities have enabled us to secure major contracts in the UK that are world class in their scope and capability."

Bristol has been selected as the UK base as 90 percent of Prime Vision clients are located within a two-hour drive of the city. Its location near Bristol International Airport gives Prime Vision staff access to excellent domestic and European services; six flights operate every day to and from Holland where the company has its headquarters and development hub.

The new office provides a meeting venue and training facilities for up to thirty people. Initially it will act as a base for Prime Vision support, project management and installation teams working on specific UK projects. Permanent staff numbers will grow in line with business needs as will Prime Vision's commitment to graduate training; its first intern placement in March this year proved a great success.
